Bergen School of Architecture: HALDBAR seminar

Universal Design: design for human diversity

27 – 28 January 2011

By

Masashi Kajita

This two half-days workshop will, through a series of drawing exercises, discuss Accessibility and Social Interaction in the frame of Universal Design, aiming to provide relevant and optimistic insight towards an integrated accessible built environment.

Your school building is the place for exploration, our focus is on Access Space that not only provides basic means of access, but also enhances everyday interactions amongst users and relations to context. Seeking to unfold potentials of Access Space, the workshop invites you to explore relationships between pleasurable experience and spatial composition articulating separation from and integration with adjacent spaces.

The workshop will emphasise the importance of explorations and intuition in the design process as well as discussing the importance of accuracy utilising the building regulations as a basic design tool.
